Brief Bio

Dr. Stephen Mandy graduated from George Washington University medical school in 1966, completed an internship in Internal Medicine at the University of Florida, and a residency in ObGyn at Sinai Hospital in Baltimore for one year before entering a Dermatology residency at Johns Hopkins. He completed dermatology training at the University of Miami in 1971 and entered private practice in 1973 after two years as a Major in the United States Air Force. From 1991 to 2002 he lived in Aspen, Colorado and was the sole dermatologist there for the duration. Dr. Mandy became a Clinical Professor of Dermatology at the University of Miami in 1984 and continues to teach there today, and is in private practice in Miami Beach.

Dr. Mandy became a passionate lover of food and wine while a resident at Miami, under the mentorship of the late Dr Louis Skinner, a dermatologist and world renowned gourmet. Always artistically inclined, he is a painter, sculptor and photographer. Athletics are an essential element of his life, and he has been a lifelong equestrian, scuba diver, karate teacher and skier.

He has authored more than 50 peer reviewed articles and 10 book chapters in dermatology, and has particular expertise in facial rejuvenation, liposuction, and laser surgery. Dr. Mandy has been on the Board of Directors of the American Society for Dermatologic Surgery since 1988, served as its President from 2001-2002, was the recipient of the 2015 Stegman award, and continues to be involved and active with the ASDS. He is a consultant to numerous pharma/device manufacturers in the aesthetic field.
